Through the darkness Ben The Fighter saw the monster creeping towards a house with a wooden bench next to it. Ben quietly drew his sword and felt goosebumps on his arms. He climbed silently up onto the roof and watched as the monster opened the door. Immediately Ben jumped down onto the ground behind the monster. He swung his trusty sword at the wild monster's neck but the monster turned and saw him and ducked down under the bench. Suddenly the monster stuck out his leg and swung it at Ben's legs and the hero fell to the floor with an 'Oof'. Quickly he rolled up onto his knees, he grabbed his spear and jabbed under the bench. The monster rolled further under the bench so he was out of reach. Just then the monster lifted up the bench with his enormous green muscly arms and threw it at Ben. Ben scrambled out of the way just in time. As he stood up he slashed with his sword and cut the monster's head off! The vile monster crashed down onto the floor, dead as a dodo!

The villagers rushed out of their houses and as morning rose they saw Ben with the monster's body in his arms carrying it to bury it. They all watched it be buried and then they had a huge celebration. No one went to school or work and they had a big party with roasted chickens, potatoes, carrots and peas and broccoli and a huge cake. They played music and games and the party went on for 2 days. Ben was given a reward of gold and diamonds and everyone said thank you. The villagers felt happy and safe for the first time that they could remember. Ben stayed for the two days and then sailed away to his home country but they remembered him forever, because the King had his finest artists paint a portrait of Ben in the great hall.
